

JD SHELBURNE JD

Nashville-based country music artist J.D. Shelburne was raised on a tobacco farm in Taylorsville, Kentucky, just outside of Louisville. When JD was 19, he found a guitar after the death of his grandmother. He quickly learned how to play it and began writing and singing songs on his own. By his sophomore year of college, he had found a few gigs at some local bars in Louisville & Lexington, Kentucky area venues, developing a large base of fans along the way. Building upon his blossoming career as a modern country singer, songwriter and performer, his debut single and video for "One Less Girl" made its world premiere on CMT in 2018. It then went on to be a Top 30 Music Row charted song at country radio, with more than 30 adds. CMT again world premiered his second song and video for "She Keeps Me Up Nights" in April of 2019. Shelburne is considered one of the hardest working artists in the business, playing over 2500 shows in his career.

JD Shelburne's new album "Straight From Kentucky," was released in June of 2021.

His debut single Straight from Kentucky, a modern-day anthem to the state he holds dear to his heart, was featured in Texas Roadhouse Restaurants Nationwide in May. "Church Pew Bar Stool" reached #1 on the CMT 12-Pack Countdown during its first week and the single "Bottoms Up Sundown" was just exclusively premiered on American Songwriter. Shelburne's latest single "Hometown In My Headlights" was premiered by Newsmax and People.com and is now featured on CMT.
